My Dear Friends,

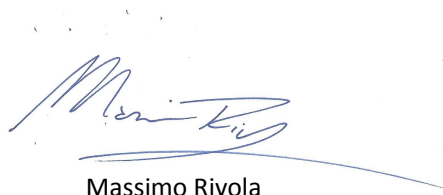

I have to confess, I had dreamed of a podium finish on the first race of the season. And that's why, at the end of a two-faced day, I am happy with the result. I know too well what kind of hell of a season we had just left behind, I know that everyone at the factory had to work his ass off to catch up, and I wish I could say 'thank you' to every one of them.

It has been good to watch Kimi's speed and to see the meticulous approach of Sebastian-one of us, from day one.

But you know me well enough and now I have to quench my first-blood enthusiasm and be pragmatic again. Especially when I think that Kimi had the potential for finishing fourth, but it would have panned out as a fifth place in reality, and anyway, he never made to the chequered flag. And I can't ignore the fact that Hamilton beat us by 1.4 seconds in qualifying and 34secs in the race. These figures hurt, but we are on the right path, so all I can say is I keep my faith in the Scuderia.

We are coming back, and being aware of that will just speed up the process. As long as we keep our feet on the ground and can count on your passion to push us ahead.

Forza Ferrari
