Maranello, 8th June 2015

My dear Friends,

It goes without saying that we came to Canada expecting more than a fourth and fifth place finish.

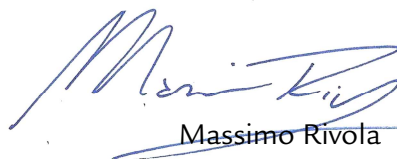

Historically, the Montreal race comes with a number of unknowns related to the weather, and to the safety car which so often come into play as the walls of this circuit, dedicated to a driver who has been a legend to all of us, do not allow the smallest mistake to drivers.

Unfortunately, after the problem he experienced in qualifying, Sebastian could only rely on help by some external factor, but Kimi's third place in qualifying made us keen to know what the actual race pace would be, since Friday practice had been marred by rain. Sadly, a mistake at Turn 10 right after Kimi's pit-call paved the way for Bottas, who then was able of managing his one-stop race-indeed, a strategy shared by most drivers, which we could not apply because we had been planning an aggressive approach to the race.

The F1 week turns the city of Montreal into a great party place, and watching so many fans on the stands, most of them clad in Scuderia red, was a real delight. And speaking of red, on Saturday, 13th Maranello will welcome the fourth edition of its Red Night and, as always, Scuderia Ferrari Club will play a major role.

No need to say, I am looking forward to seeing you all!

Forza Ferrari, Forza Jules!
