My Dear Friends,

No doubt we have seen more thrilling races than this one in the past. But then from both Friday and Saturday it was apparent that, unless we got some rain, we would be at risk of having an uneventful Grand Prix. Our race pace was so good that we could put Seb on a three-stop strategy, fitting Option tires on his second stop.

Today, Seb's rhythm was impressive: his strategy was more aggressive, but perhaps it was also his desire for revenge after the mistakes he made in Mexico to make him push like hell all through the 71 lap race, so that his gap from second-placed Hamilton over the finish line was a mere 6.4 secs, 15 seconds behind winner Nico Rosberg and a comfortable margin over Kimi who, in turn, had no trouble from Bottas and could manage his race. It's also worth noting that we and the Mercedes were the only one not to get lapped in the race...

Also in Sao Paulo we saw so many red flags, and a huge Ferrari tarpaulin covering up a grandstand. Which prompted me to organize a contest for making the biggest banner ever...

And on the same subject I can't help thinking of last week at Mugello. A fantastic day on what I believe to be the best track in the world. Once again you showed your passion and love for this brand, so that even our President was impressed.

Special thanks to all our volunteers from the various Clubs. Unity is strength, and this makes me particularly proud. Keep on like this!

Ciao Jules, Forza Ferrari!!
