GESTIONE SPORTIVA

Maranello, 3rd November 2015

My dear Friends,

It's been a while since we last had so many disappointment packed into a single weekend. So much work from our mechanics, before qualifying and the race, and so much still ahead now...

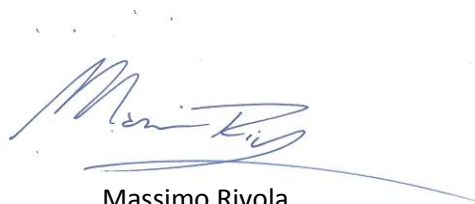

Seb's race, unfortunately, took a turn for the worse at the start, as his race pace was excellent. I think he could have been up there with the Mercedes, even if not to beat them perhaps. His first lap was lost, but then he drove on the edge until he made a mistake.

As for Kimi's race, we knew it would have been difficult as he started from the last row: actually, things did not look bad for him in the race, but this time around, in clashing with his fellow countryman he took the worst of it.

So we can wrap it up as an unfortunate weekend, point-wise, but one to remember for the atmosphere provided by so many fans on the grandstands. I think this nation had been waiting for so long for F1 to come back and, judging from the amount of red apparel, Ferrari had been long awaited, too. Unfortunately we disappointed all these expectations, so we can only learn from our mistakes and go to Brazil with even more determination.

I would have loved to go to Mugello this weekend coming from a different result, but we still can be proud for what we've achieved this season. So I can't wait to meet you on one of the most beautiful tracks of the world on the occasion of the Finali: there we can live our passion together.

Ciao Jules, Forza Ferrari!
